Employers can play a unique role in helping their employees change behaviours and be in more control of their own health. During this video Bupa’s behavioural scientists share tips, tools and advice on how to apply behavioural insights to boost employee engagement to build a healthier workplace.

You’ll learn how to build effective engagement programmes that encourage employees to pro-actively use health and wellbeing services.

Why is using behavioural insights important?

Unless a business influences behaviour, it will not succeed. Too often, solutions that are implemented to overcome challenges are based on how we want individuals to behave, rather than how they actually behave in the real world.

Behavioural insights can be applied in the workplace to:

- Encourage employees to engage in conversations about their wellbeing
- Increase use of health and wellbeing services that provide early intervention
- Encourage employees to take more control of their health and utilise preventative practices

What you can expect from this module

- A deeper understanding of the benefits of boosting employee engagement
- Discover what we mean by ‘wellbeing engagement’ and learn effective techniques to encourage employees to better engage with their own health and wellbeing
- A practical three-step approach to apply behavioural insights to your health and wellbeing programmes:
